Constantin Iordachi, Kristof Van Assche : The Bio-Politics of the Danube Delta: Nature, History, Policies before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Bio-Politics of the Danube Delta: Nature, History, Policies:

In this volume Constantin Iordachi and Kirstof Van Assche take an interdisciplinary look at the history, policy, and culture of the development and politics of the Danube Delta.

The insights discovered in this book are bold and we are obligated to listen; they give voice to so many stories that have lacked a voice until now. Van Assche and Iordachi have brought together an extraordinary team of researchers who elevate our knowledge and understanding of this special place, the Danube Delta, and the many issues surrounding it. Now, we need to translate these insights into current and future planning. This volume offers us an enormous opportunity to make that happen. (Kyle Whitfield, University of Alberta)The Bio-Politics of the Danube Delta offers an intricate, thoroughly composed, and timely insight into the physical, historical, cultural-political and policy/planning landscapes of the delta. In doing so, the volume contributes interdisciplinary perspectives on socio-political and ecological transformation processes to ongoing debates on 'sustainable development' of the region. A must read for all scholars working on transformation and change processes in post-Soviet settings. (Anna-Katharina Hornidge, University of Bonn, Germany)The Danube Delta is one of the largest and most valuable wetlands in Europe. Throughout history it has been a contested area and subject to conflicting claims and policies from the Ottoman Empire, Russia, Romania, the Soviet Union, and Ukraine. In this volume Constantin Iordachi and Kirstof Van Assche take an interdisciplinary look at the history, policy, and culture of the development and politics of the Danube Delta. About the Author Constantin Iordachi is an associate professor of history and co-director of Pasts, Inc. Center for Historical Studies at the Central European University, Budapest. Kristof Van Assche is an associate professor of planning, governance and development at the University of Alberta and visiting associate professor of strategic communication at Wageningen University.
