John Mullin Batten : To and From Rome (Classic Reprint) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised To and From Rome (Classic Reprint):

Excerpt from To and From RomePreviously to visiting Rome I often contemplated what sort of a place I would find. I had it all pictured in my mind the Appian Way and the Aqueduct of Claudius. These were the first I saw in entering Rome. The Appian Way, which I thought was built of solid masonry, with Julius Cæsar's and his contemporaries' tombs on either of the Way. Instead thereof I found Appian Way was only a macadamized road 25 feet wide, entering Rome, and was 180 miles long, and Claudius Aqueduct was built about 20 feet from the ground. Rome now is a modern city in all respects. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
