We just got back from a week on the Amalfi Coast with this as our only guidebook. I've always sworn by the Eyewitness Guides, but I found the Eyewitness "Top 10" format to be annoying -- information scattered throughout the book and often the same info repeated in a different format. For example, we fell in love with the town of Praiano, which is a UNESCO World Heritage Site, but there was only a tiny paragraph about it. If you're planning to spend more than a few days in this beautiful part of Italy, go with a more comprehensive guide book.

We often use the Top 10 when we visit cities. Experience has taught us a small travel guide will be used when we explore, and a larger book will be left in our holiday rental apartment. Yes, the Top 10 all repeat the same information in different categories, which is often frustrating, redundant. We are reluctant fans. It is a good pre-trip book to study to discover the most important things to see do. And, as stated we will take it with us during the day to reference a few time. Oh, just remembered the map(s) VITAL and they make it worth buying the book!

I always prefer and buy the Top Ten series whenever they are available for the locations I am hitting. We travel a lot. I cannot take a lot of extra weight and volume, especially when going to several places. These books are light and small, and much less expensive than their big DK brothers. I like the pictures, maps, diagrams, and background material that DK is known for. But we don't need the encyclopedic depth of the big books. The Top Ten books give plenty of detail, and the format allows easy chunking of topics as needed. Not just a list of 10 places, but many descriptions covering diverse topics. What I want now is to see these in electronic format so I can take them on my ereader without the bulk and weight of the paper versions. But I don't want to lease them, I want to own what I pay for, so I can pass it on to others.
